

New Courses Will Be Offered At Torrance High

Public speaking, drama, photography and journalism head a list of new courses to be offered at Torrance High School next semester according to Lloyd Waller, principal.

Students now registering for fall classes are being asked to seriously consider these courses along with such classes as modern literature, band, orchestra, boy's chorus, girl's chorus, and mixed chorus.

The new courses are in line with the policy to streamline the high school curriculum. Students are advised to take a program selected so as to give them mastery in a certain field. Programs are arranged so that the student will also have time for the above suggested electives.

To date, 130 students have been registered at the school, this number being equally divided between freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors.

According to the principal's office, students registering are not taking full advantage of the new courses being offered.

Registration will continue at the high school and students will receive cards with the date and time that they should come for registration.
